Battery distribution of communication base stations in the Democratic Republic of Congo

Overview

How many radio stations are there in Congo?

There were 20 radio stations in the Democratic Republic of the Congo as of 1999. Radio is the dominant medium, with a handful of stations, including state-run Radio-Télévision Nationale Congolaise (RTNC), broadcasting across the country.

Will Liquid Telecom build a subsea cable landing station in DRC?

In 2020, one of the major turning points was the ARPCT granting Liquid Telecom a license to build a subsea cable landing station in the country. Liquid Telecom's landing station is expected to connect DRC to Google's Equiano subsea cable which will link Africa and Europe.

How can the DRC bridge the digital divide?

Deploying and operating networks, particularly in deep rural areas, continues to be a significant challenge in the DRC. To bridge the digital divide and expand network coverage in underserved communities, the companies have pledged to jointly construct up to 2,000 new solar-powered base stations over six years, using 2G and 4G technologies.

How has the DRC benefited from ICT and telecommunication development?

The DRC has come a long way in terms of ICT and telecommunication development, especially with the efforts deployed in terms of LTE connectivity and submarine cable projects which have boosted the sector and allowed the country to enjoy a relatively better connectivity.

Is 5G a future for the Democratic Republic of Congo?

In May 2018, LTE licenses were issued and Vodacom and Orange were the first two operators to launch the country's first commercial LTE networks. 5G is now a far-fetched goal in the Democratic Republic of Congo, just as is the case for most sub-Saharan African countries. Wholesale industry guarantees connectivity.

Who was not informed about RTNC interference in Congo?

Radio-Télévision Nationale Congolaise (RTNC), the state-run national broadcaster, was interfering in Congo. The then Telecommunications Minister Thomas Luhaka was not informed of such interference by the government.
